

NEWS OF RICHMOND

Husband Slayer Gets 18 Years at Hard Labor.

RELIGION MADE HER RUN A MUCK

Negro Woman Creates a Sensation in Jackson Ward.—Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting.—A. C. L. Wreck Not a Serious Affair.

(Special to the Daily Press.) RICHMOND, VA., Jan. 11.—Eighteen years at hard labor in the penitentiary.

That was what the jury said in the case of Bettie Evans, the negro woman who shot and killed her husband, Norvell Evans, in this city, Dec. 1, at their home in Madison street.

The case was tried in the Hustings Court, before Judge Witt and a jury, and was begun yesterday. The jury did not agree last night, and Judge Witt sent them to Murphy's hotel, where they spent the night, coming into court this morning at 11 o'clock.

The woman contended that she killed her husband in self-defense, and said that when he came home the night of the tragedy he had beaten and threatened to kill her. She said he came home and was under the influence of liquor. They had some words and she received a beating. Norvell went to bed and took with him a loaded revolver, holding it in his hands. While he was asleep the woman took the pistol, she said, and when Norvell awoke and tried to take it from her, she fired two shots into his head, killing him instantly.

The woman has been confined in the city jail since the murder, and her friends raised a sum of money and employed Harry M. Smith to defend her.

Upon the announcement of the verdict today Mr. Smith made a motion for the arrest of judgment and will take the case up to the higher courts for review.

Religion Drove Her Crazy.

Elenora Reval got religious and three old Jackson ward into a real spasm from one end to the other.

When the "sinner" spoke to Elenora she was at her home in Third street, cooking, and happened to have a knife in her hand. Clinging to this she rushed forth bareheaded into the street, yelling at the top of her voice.

"Fie de Lord, dat eal done run mad, wid a knife in her hand," declared the word's population, so Elenora was given all the room she wanted.

Elenora's yells brought people from every quarter of the ward, and for about two hours there was great excitement. In fact, the greatest since the Mitchell-Bailey campaign parade passed through this portion of the city.

The woman was heading for the crematory, and perhaps would have ended her wild career there had she not been stopped by her aunt, Lizzie Reval, who lives in St. Paul street, just a square from the crematory.

Lizzie said she told Elenora about the sudden death of her uncle several days ago and it must have scared her into praying.

It was quite a while before the excitement subsided and the streets were clear of people.

Thomas Hundley's Wife Seeks Him.

Thomas Hundley, a colored man, suddenly disappeared from his home in Eighth street a week ago and his family is anxious to know his whereabouts.

The man's hat was found Friday floating on the water in the dock, and it is thought that he has been drowned.

The wife, Elenora Hundley, offers $50 reward to any one who will give information as to his whereabouts, dead or alive.

Not a Serious Wreck.

Officials of the Atlantic Coast Line to this city today say that the derailment of the New York and Florida special yesterday afternoon near Hardville resulted in slightly bruising two passengers, a fireman and two of the cooks in the dining car.

Chamber's Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Richmond chamber of commerce will be held tomorrow at 6 p. m. in the assembly hall of the chamber.

As this is the most important meeting of the year, when officers and directors are elected; when the work of the fiscal year just ended is reviewed; and when, in a large measure, the objects to be accomplished or undertaken for the ensuing year are presented to the attention of members, with the view of enlisting their active interest and assistance; it is desirable that the fullest attendance should be had.

RAILROADS IN POLITICS.

One Way to Get Them Out Suggested by Mr. Newlands.

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The attention of the senate was today divided between the statehood question and the question of governmental regulation of railroads.

Mr. Newlands made a formal speech on the railroad subject and his close was engaged in a spirited controversy over the points involved with Messrs. Spooner, Foraker and others.

All the amendments to the statehood bill except that relating to liquor traffic in Indian Territory were agreed to.

Newland's Argument.

Mr. Newlands addressed the senate on his joint resolution providing for a commission to frame a national incorporation act for the construction and consolidation of railroads engaged in interstate commerce.

"The time has now come to ignore State lines as to the construction, operation and management of the inter-

State railroads of the country," he said.

Railroads and Politics.

"The only way to get the railroads out of politics," he concluded, "is to take away their interest in politics by making taxes a mathematical certainty, by providing for a fixed and just return upon their capital and by placing the control of their operations in a body of great character and dignity such as I believe the interstate commerce commission to be."

"Does the senator claim that the power to prohibit is comprised in the power to regulate commerce?" asked Mr. Foraker, and Mr. Newlands said he thought so.

No Reredy in Federal Law.

Mr. Spooner raised the point that it would be impossible by federal enactment to regulate commerce in the states. "The power to regulate commerce among the states exists," he said, "but," he asked, "how will you spell out that the power to regulate commerce in the states?"

Mr. Newlands replied that he did not intend that congress had power to regulate commerce confined exclusively to any one State. He did intend, however, that when the government constructed a railroad no State had power to tax it out of existence.

Lottery Ticket Traffic.

The bill making the restriction on the transportation of lottery tickets between the States applicable to transportation between the States and territories was passed. Mr. Clay said that under the decisions of the courts the existing law did not apply to traffic with the territories. He expressed the opinion that the bill would effect a regulation of the lottery ticket traffic with the Philippines and Porto Rico.

HE THREW MONEY AT HER.

Reply of Hannah Elias to Aged White Lover's Charges.

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—The final stage in the struggle for possession of nearly $125,000 between John R. Platt, aged millionaire, and Hannah Elias, a negro, who, he charges, wrongfully obtained the money from him, was scheduled to begin before Justice Bischoff in the Supreme Court today.

The Elias woman maintains the vast sum named in Platt's suit was given to her voluntarily by Platt—that he literally threw money at her. She has told of one instance when, she says, after pressing her to take a large sum, which she offered, he threw a great handful of bank notes on the floor and she had a servant gather it up on a dust pan. On the other hand Platt claims that the defendant resorted to every trick and device her ingenuity could command to extort money from him during the 20 years of their acquaintance. Mr. Platt is now 87 years old and very feeble.

When the case was called it was found that several witnesses regarded as material were not present and on request of Mrs. Elias' counsel the case went over until tomorrow.

THE TELLTALE-SCARF PIN.

Found in Tucker's Pockets; Identified as Miss Page's.

(By Associated Press.) CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Jan. 11.—The most interesting piece of testimony yet offered by the prosecution in the trial of Charles L. Tucker, charged with the murder of Mabel Page, came today when Amy Roberts, a servant in the Page household, stated that a scarf pin, which had been found in the defendant's overcoat pocket was the property of Miss Page, and was in a pin cushion on the latter's bureau on the day before the murder. The maid identified the pin by the design and two peculiar beads in the shaft.

He Talked With Mabel. Miss Roberts further testified that on the day Tucker called at the Page house to see Harold Page he also talked with Mabel Page. This was the first testimony introduced tending to establish that Tucker was acquainted with the murdered woman.

Marked interest was aroused at the afternoon session when General Josephus W. Whitney told of a conversation he had with Tucker at the Newton police station on the night that the prisoner was placed under arrest. General Whitney stated that after Tucker had been confronted with the knife sheath and the broken knife blade he buried his face in his hands and said: "By gee; this knife makes a bad case against me."

Batch of Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The President today sent to the Senate the following nominations: Postmasters: Georgia—Beverly B. Hayes, Wrightsville. South Carolina—James E. Horton, Belton; Ina A. Calloway, Clemson College. Tennessee—Daniel M. Nobles, Paris.

Letter to A. L. Parker.

Newport News, Va.

Dear Sir: There are several ways of cheating in milk. An old-fashioned way is to water it. Nobody waters it now. A better way is to take out the cream—rich milk with cream taken out is as good as poor milk with its cream all in.

But we needn't go into particulars. You don't rob your milk and your customers.

Paint is as easy as milk to cheat with. Good paint is as rare as good milk; for human nature is much the same in milkmen and paint men.

You are just and true with your milk; so are we with our paint. Devote lead-and-zinc is twice as good as mixed paints. There's twice as much butter in it.

Mr. J. T. Ladd, Cheraw, S. C., writes: "When Mr. Evans painted his house with Devco, he figured on how other paints covered and had enough left to paint three large rooms. He was so pleased that he has used Devco on two other houses."

Yours truly

DISFRANCHISE NEGRO

Even if it is Necessary to Lose Congressmen.

GOVERNOR GLENN'S VIEWS

Expressed in His Inauguration Speech at Raleigh.—The Retiring Executive Introduces His Successor.—Reception and Ball at Night.

(By Associated Press.)

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 11.—R. B. Glenn, of Winston, was inaugurated today as governor of North Carolina, the exercises taking place in the Academy of Music. The rain prevented outdoor exercises arranged at the capitol. The other officers also took the oath of office, this being administered by Chief Justice Clark.

Cheers For Aycock.

Ex-Governor Aycock was wildly cheered as he introduced the new governor.

An immense crowd was in attendance. Governor Glenn declared for the disfranchising amendment even at the loss of congressmen. As to education of the negro, he said this should be given as benefits condition. He opposed a pro rata division of school taxes, or giving each race its own taxes, saying the money should be divided as needed by each race.

Favors Child Labor Law.

He approved organized labor, but urged that it not be used to keep non-union men from work, favored a child labor law permitting no child under fourteen in factories who could not read and write, with none under twelve; favored a strict divorce law; asked for a reformatory; urged strict legislation against lynching; declared for no backward step in educating the masses nor in regard to temperance legislation.

A big reception and ball tonight closed the inaugural event. Sixteen military companies were present in the parade and were reviewed by Governor Glenn and staff.

A COONSKIN FARE.

It Would Have Paid the Traveler to Let the Change Go.

Many years ago, as the story runs, when coonskins were worth six bits apiece in Arkansas and a regular fee of two bits was assessed for ferrying a horseman across the St. Francis river, there came along a traveler whose entire capital consisted of but a single pelt, and the ferryman hadn't a cent of change in his pocket.

The traveler was bound to cross, but refused to pay three times as much as the man who passed before him or the one who was to come next. The ferryman would not wet an oar unless payment for his services was assured. Here was ample foundation for an argument, and presumably the opportunity was not neglected. But a satisfactory arrangement was finally reached, the traveler getting value received for his coonskin by being wafted thrice across the stream. This of course would leave him on the right side, and neither party to the trade would have cause for complaint. Such was the generous spirit of accommodation which obtained in these earlier days, such—but hold on a bit.

On the second trip the ferryman chanced to inspect the coonskin closely and found that it was by no means up to the recognized standard. Maybe it had been killed too early in the season or was not properly stretched. Anyway, he decided that four bits was all it was worth, and the traveler frankly admitted the soundness of his judgment, acknowledged that he had received its value in the double ferryage and forthwith started on his fifty mile ride up the river to the nearest point where it was fordable.—Field and Stream.

The Beautiful.

Beauty prevails in spite of all we do. We may build ugly buildings, we may think ugly thoughts, we may wrinkle ourselves in worries or the contemplation of ugliness, we may even worship ugliness under the name of utility, but lightly, without an effort, the gentle hand of beauty descends upon all. Beauty may do her subtle work in many ways. Sun, moon, fog and rain are alike her servants. The fresh red houses, garish eyesores in the sun, become wonderful as they loom blood red before the man in the mist, or in a few years the red is quieted, and the searching light only makes it more beautiful.—Arthur Ransome.

Doubtful Economy.

"Of course," he said, "I appreciate the motive that actuates you in your efforts to get along without a girl, but—"

"Well?" she said inquiringly as he paused.

"Taking everything into consideration," he went on, "is it true economy?"

"Isn't it?" she demanded.

"Well, I hardly feel competent to pass judgment on the question," he replied. "I have just received our family physician's bill for the treatment of those three cases of acute dyspepsia that developed in the family during the last month. Now, perhaps?"

But she was just as mad as if he hadn't tried to break it to her gently.—New York Times.

Your Grandmother used Piso's Cure.

It is still the best remedy for Coughs.

THE AMATEUR IN SPORTS.

He is One Who Plays Only For the Pleasure of Playing.

An amateur is one who plays for pleasure only. He can play with whom he pleases, so long as he plays for pleasure alone. He may play with or against a team which is being paid or playing for gate money. He may play with professionals or against them. There is no reason why an amateur should not play in any company he pleases so long as he enjoys it, provided he plays only for that reason. The professional is one who engages in athletics for a livelihood. This, however, would not make a professional baseball player a professional tennis player. Experience has taught that, as a rule, men who are playing for a livelihood—that is, for money—place a small value on pleasure and are ready to mar the game by quarreling, trickery or unfair dealing. It is only when the professional hurts the pleasure of the game that he is objectionable. This is not the distinction perceived by our makers of rules, who have been so absorbed in the money, summer baseball and summer board question that they failed to notice how rapidly they were creating in the amateur world all the unpleasant characteristics of the professional, the most notable of which is quarrelsomeness and making a business of it all.

The colleges for their athletic intercourse need only the common rule that an amateur is one who has received no compensation for his athletic skill, that those who have received such compensation are professionals and that professionals are barred. With all subscribing to this simple rule and living up to it only an agreement to meet annually each year for a certain period would be further needed.—Outing.

THE MEALS FOR POETS.

English Breakfast Parties Early in the Last Century.

The breakfast party became fashionable in the early decades of the last century. Samuel Rogers being one of the principal hosts. Round his table gathered all the wits and celebrities of the day. At his house in St. James place Byron and Moore first came together "over a mess of potatoes and vinegar." It was in his dining room that Erskine told the story of his first brief and Grattan that of his last duel, while the Iron Duke described Waterloo as a "battle of giants." Rogers asked people, it was currently reported, by way of probation for dinner, but his breakfast parties were more social than his dinners, which, comparatively speaking, were affairs of necessity or form. His invitation notes were models of penmanship and conciseness. "Will you breakfast with me tomorrow?—S. R." was the pithy invitation to a celebrated wit. "Won't it?" was the congenial response. He was fond of quoting Rousseau's profession of unguilt in pour les dejeuner, the time of the day when we are quietest and talk most at our ease. Greville in his "Memoirs" notes one of these breakfasts in 1831. "Sydney Smith, Luttrell, John Russell and Moore excessively agreeable. I never heard anything more entertaining than Sydney Smith—such bursts of merriment and so dramatic! Breakfasts are the meals for poets. I met Wordsworth and Southey at breakfast. Rogers' are always agreeable."—Chambers' Journal.

Codd's Curious Defenses.

An interesting book might be written on the subject of "Curious Defenses."

One excellent instance is supplied here in what was known as "Codd's Puzzle." Codd was defending a client accused of stealing a duck. He set up seven defenses: (1) The accused bought the duck and paid for it; (2) he found it; (3) it was given to him; (4) it flew into his garden; (5) it was put in his pocket while he slept. Six and seven are not recorded, but an amicus curiae suggested that there never was any duck at all. The accused was acquitted, not "because they chose any particular defense, but because they did not know which to choose, and they gave the prisoner the benefit of the doubt."—Spectator.

The Hygienic Value of Sunday.

Sunday is not only a religious but a hygienic institution. It is beneficent in its uses, morally and physically. How workers should best spend the Sunday is still a moot question, but that it should be a time of soul refreshment and recreation, a moment, as Miss Correll expresses it, "for standing and taking breath on the threshold of another week," a season for thought, for intellectual enjoyment, for the solace of nature and the admiration of its wonders and beauty, no sensible person will be likely to deny. Whether motoring or card playing is the best way to attain these ends must be left to each individual's judgment.—Lady Violet Greville in London Graphic.

Discontent.

The peacock heard the nightingale singing. "That seems easy to do," said the big bird. "I'll see if I can't sing as well as that."

At the dismal squawk that followed a moment later every living thing within hearing distance fled in terror.

"Curses on my fatal gift of beauty!" exclaimed the peacock. "Why wasn't I made plain, like all the great musicians!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Voice of the Worldly.

"Poverty is no disgrace," said the romantic young woman.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, "and it is no great recommendation either."—Washington Star.

He who gives up the smallest part of a secret has the rest no longer in his power.—Richter.

OLD GEM SUPERSTITIONS.

The diamond extinguishes intermittent fevers when attached somewhere about the person.

The amethyst stills headaches, makes drunkards abstemious and sober; hence its name.

The hematite or bloodstone heals disease of the eye.

The carbuncle is said to cure headache if given to the sick in solution.

The Jasper cures inflammation of the head and prevents nightmares and is a preservative against pestilence and epilepsy.

The onyx, dissolved, keeps off nightmares and phantasms, and when powdered is good for toothache.

The jacinth stops coughs, heals hernia and is good against melancholy if drunk with vinegar.

The chalcodendron, worn round the person, heals the wound from the scorpion's bite.

The topaz, powdered and drunk, brings persons raving mad back to their state. If it is worn on the person it is also helpful in this case.

Consumption's Roll of Honor.

Dr. John B. Huber, writing on the history of consumption in the Medical Record, mentions the following more or less great persons who have died as its victims: Marie Bashkirtseff, Xavier Bichat, H. C. Bunner, Friedrich Chopin, Ben Crane, John Godman, John Paul Jones, John Keats, Dr. Rene T. H. Laennec, Sidney Lanier, Jules Bastien-Lepage, Ethelbert Nevin, Henry Purcell, Elizabeth Felix Rachel, Friedrich Schiller, John Sterling, Laurence Sterne, Robert Louis Stevenson, Henry Timrod, Carl Maria von Weber, Artemus Ward, Henry Kirk White and Barnum Spinoza.

"I'm so sorry to trouble you," Mrs. Vinton went on, "but will you tell me some good way to cook pig pigeons? Jimmy has just sent me word that he is going out to shoot some. He's bound to bring a lot home, and I haven't the remotest idea how to prepare them."
